Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: .following table shows the amount of materials required to build pavements of various areas, based on a 1:2:3 mixture and a thickness of four inches: After the pavement has been protected by the earth covering for a week or ten days as suggested, covering may be removed and the pavement put to use, although heavy or loaded wagons should not be driven over the concrete until it is at least a month old. A barnyard pavement subjected to heavy loads should be at least six inches thick, otherwise four inches will be sufficient. Manueb Pits Manure pits on the farm are not the modern innovation they are commonly supposed to be. The fact is that they were commonly used on Roman farms before the birth of Christ for we find Varro, a Roman writer, discussing them quite at length in one of his books. His principal complaint seems to be that while every Roman farmer had one, he should have two pits! One for the fresh manure and the other for the manure to be taken to the fields. He also advocates protection from the elements because exposure robs the manure of its chief value. Need we say that there should be a manure pit on every farm? If the Romans found it a good practice, surely we are not so progressive and so far advanced in our modern day agriculture when we have not approached them in our methods of conserving the most economical soil...
