Excerpt: .gleaming in the light, and making such a fat grunting noise, as if they did like it so much. One night walking along the bank, I came, says Gordon, within fifteen yards of a huge hippopotamus, who stood and looked at me, his hide glistening in the light of the full moon. He was in no hurry at all, and stopped several times on his way to the river, where he plumped in with a great splash. After a while I came on another, and waved him in with my handkerchief. On other occasions Gordon describes herds of the hippopotami rushing through the water with a roar like that of a cataract. In an open boat, near Lardo, he was in danger of being swamped by them. Sometimes they are very fierce, and bite the boats in two. Their jaws are immense, and go...
