Excerpt: . . . 11 considering now exactly how to implement that. We appreciate your work here in the committee and in Congress to get the au-thorizing authority for that adopted, and we intend to pursue it. Its not a subject that carries a lot of favor with some of our other G-7 partners, those that have heavier official debt than we do with the Russians. But its something that may well require our leader-ship and experimentation, and were certainly working away on it. The second aspect, though, of Russian involvement is more trou-bling. I must say this was an area that we spent a considerable amount of time on in Ottawa. As you know, we have been oper-ating for most of the past 10 years under an umbrella agreement that was negotiated with the Russian Federation at the beginning of the Nunn-Lugar program. That agreement expired. Its...
